For Immediate Release*Synergex Announces*Exclusive Value Priced Program launched in Latin America

Mississauga, Ontario, April 14, 2008 - Synergex Corporation (TSX: SYX) ("Synergex" or "the Company"), a leading international provider of integrated logistics and distribution services, today announced the expansion of value price video game programs to further broaden its core Commercial Gateway Logistics and Distribution product lines in Latin America.

Value priced video games are popular games beyond their new release period but which remain popular with consumers due to their lower price points. Studies have shown that value priced games increase point-of-purchase impulse buys and sell into a wider demographic than new releases. All titles in this category have already had great success and Synergex' strategy is to obtain exclusive distribution rights for these markets.

David Aiello, CEO has appointed Sheldon Parsons as the Product Manager for all value priced video game programs. Sheldon joins the company with 15 years experience in the marketing and distribution of video games holding positions with EB Games and Blockbuster Canada prior to joining Synergex.

Sheldon commented, "Value priced games have great appeal for the consumer and we expect to substantially increase our Latin American sales volumes in 2008." We will create and offer a selection of exclusive Synergex opportunities to Latin America at value pricing, such as: increased value software selection and pallet programs to our mass retailers, exclusive bundling opportunities with software and higher margin accessories as well as multi pack software programs for both the console and PC markets. These programs generate a higher margin than new release games and we expect will significantly advance our growth in the Latin American marketplace.

Value priced video games are sold to major retailers including: Wal-Mart Mexico, Sears Mexico, Carrefour Brazil and Colombia, and Falabella Colombia and Chile by wholly owned Synergex subsidiaries in Latin American. Revenue from value programs is expected to contribute millions of dollars to Latin American results during the next year and may exceed sales of $10 million.

The Company previously announced that it intends to grow its core Commercial Gateway Logistics and Distribution business in the upcoming years through the acquisition of new customers, broadening of product lines, and the expansion of the Company's proven business model into the emerging Latin American markets. Expanding our value priced video game programs is the first building block in this strategy.
